The Emperor's New Clothes. Many years ago, there was an Emperor, who was so excessively fond of new clothes, that he spent all his money in dress. He did not trouble himself in the least about his soldiers; nor did he care to go either to the theatre or the chase, except for the opportunities then afforded him for displaying his new clothes. He had a different suit for each hour of the day; and as of any other king or emperor, one is accustomed to say, "he is sitting in council," it was ...

Although Andersen wrote the tale, 'The Emperor's New Clothes' has the ring of ancient authenticity about it. And with good reason: Andersen based 'The Emperor's New Clothes' on 'So ist der Lauf der Welt', a German translation of a medieval Spanish fairy tale from a 1335 collection, El Conde Lucanor. In the Spanish original, an inset tale titled 'Of that which happened to a King and three impostors', the cloth-weavers tell the king that only a man's legitimate son will ...
